According to IHL, civilians in occupied territories can be assigned to residence for imperative reasons of security. However, such a decision should be taken by the competent authority on an individual basis (see Collective punishments [1]), with a possibility to appeal it, and subject to legal review every six months.

See also Civilian internees [2]; Internment [3].
CASES

Israel, Ajuri v. IDF Commander [10]

Israel, Detention of Unlawful Combatants [Part A.] [12]

United States, The Taguba Report [13]

Source URL: https://casebook.icrc.org/glossary/assigned-residence

Links